ESTATE PLANNING FOR OUR LOVED ONES

One of the greatest gifts we can leave our loved ones is an organized estate.

While it may be unpleasant to think about, the time we spend now will help our loved ones to cope later, and will also ensure that our wishes will be carried out as we intended without any harmful family disputes.

If proper planning isn't done before our passing, what may be left behind is a distribution that is carried out far differently than what we had intended or desired. Problems such as a lengthy, expensive probate administration (with costs totaling 10% of the estate or more), loss of privacy, taxes, or infighting amongst our heirs can all result from postponing our estate planning until it is too late.

At J.G. Keys, Jr., LLC, we understand that proper estate planning can be a challenging process without the right tools and guidance. It can be especially challenging if other factors are in play, such as a disabled or special needs child, or children from another marriage, just to name a few.

Let's set a time to meet with family, clients, or yourself, to discuss straightforward explanations of significant estate planning options available, so that the right decisions can be made based upon a clear and accurate understanding of the process for the private transfer of family assets of a deceased loved one, without any interference by a probate court.

I am available to meet with you, your family, or your clients at the home, office, or any location that is convenient for the client. The meeting usually takes less than an hour.

Please take a few moments and review the articles excerpted from my website to help you prepare for our meeting. There is also a planning worksheet attached to help you think about your desired options.

I look forward to meeting with you in the near future.

Thanks and Have a Blessed Day!

Jim Keys
